49% ISRAELIS OPPOSE THE RAISING OF PIGS

by Rafael E. Gill, Director,
Pori Public Opinion Research of Israel

Tel Aviv, (JCNS) -- Jewish traditional objection to pork remains strong in Israel, even among people who say they are not religious. This is revealed in a nationwide public opinion poll by Pori.

According to this, 47 percent of Israel's adult population support the law prohibiting the raising of pigs in nearly all parts of the country and another 2 percent want the law enforced in Christian areas, such as Nazareth.

The returns show that almost half of Israel's adult population favors present legislation, while considerably less than this percentage consider themselves religiously Orthodox.

Of the remainder, 43 percent expressed the opinion that raising pigs was a private matter which should not be regulated by law and 8 percent had no comment.

RENE CASSIN

One of my most treasured documents is a warm, personal letter Rene Cassin wrote me from his summer home two years ago. At the time Cassin was head of France' Conseil Constitutionnel, one of the country's most important and most influential institutions. Known mostly to the intellectual elite, especially those interested in international law, and as a close friend of General De Gaulle, he also was very much respected in the upper strata of the United Nations.

Many important UN steps, particularly in the field of human rights, were taken because of Rene Cassin's extreme dedication to the cause of man's freedom and human dignity.

This letter, it seems to me, was written in apologetic vein since M. Cassin had no time to have an enclosed article translated into English. Though he praised my knowledge of French and because of it he left the supervision of the translation of the manuscript to me, I did not publish it in English but saved it for the first issue of Nouveau Monde. (I have a deep, innate fear of translations: "Traduire, c'est trahir.")

In my opinion, Rene Cassin, who received last week the Nobel Prize for Peace, always has been the symbol of an integrated Jew in a free country. He never possessed the slightest trace of a Jewish inferiority complex. Whether a member of De Gaulle's government, involved in the leadership of the Supreme Court or a representative of France at the United Nations, simultaneously he was a true Jewish leader; to this day he has remained the president of the Alliance Israelite Universelle. More than that, he considers himself a Torah Jew in the sense that to him the Law of Sinai and the State of Israel are part of Jewishness.

A descendant of one of the most distinguished French Jewish families from the Provence which gave France and the Jews intellectual leaders, the 81-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner has remained a Frenchman to the core and a Jew as well. It certainly is no accident that, immediately upon the conclusion of his press conference about the Nobel Prize, Rene Cassin asked the reporters that he be excused for he was due at a board meeting of the Jewish Alliance and had to be punctual.

I remember a visit to his offices in the Conseil Constitutionnel in Paris. I walked to the old building, through Avenue de l'Opera to the neighborhood of the Louvre. It occurred to me that Cassin's office is situated to suit the man and has the aspect of what he represents: the France that is eternal; the France of the Revolution; the France of the human rights; the France of the most glorious tradition of humanity; the France that truly is equality. This is a section of Paris where, one senses, he belongs. For here men fought for freedom for all and this legacy is guarded by such as Rene Cassin.

I recall the time he told me that the Jewish position in France never has truly been undermined by the insignificant antisemitic minority except during the years of occupation when France was in chains. Racial hatred, religious intolerance never has influenced the low strata populace, he said; the French never understood it. That's why, Cassin explained, today in France we are concerned for human rights; that is why the Jewish concept of Tzedec and the notion of what is just in the eyes of Frenchmen are intertwined and this association will endure.

Today Cassin heads the European Council for Human Rights and continues this struggle. Perhaps he is one of the Jews of our time who most profoundly have absorbed the essence of the teachings of our prophets. Thus Jews have reason to be proud of this Nobel Prize.

Canada assures Eban:

WILL SUPPORT ISRAEL PEACE EFFORT

JEWISH SETTLEMENTS FOR HEBRON, JERICHO

Jerusalem, (JCNS) - The Government of Israel has taken a revolutionary step in connection with the resettling of certain areas captured from the Arabs during the Six Day War. According to Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon, his Government will establish a Jewish town attached to historic Hebron. It also will found a second agricultural settlement in liberated Kfar Etzion; another Jewish settlement will be a part of Jericho.

In making these announcements on Monday in the town of Carmiel near Haifa, Mr. Allon declared that the twin Arab and Jewish towns of Nazareth in the Galilee have proven "that Jews and Arabs could live next to each other." This we also shall demonstrate in Hedron, Kfar Etzion and Jericho.

These new settlements in urban centers are vital for the security of the country, he said. The Jewish section of Hebron will be called Kiryat Hebron.

1,000 EGYPTIAN JEWS ARE HOSTAGES

New York, (JCNS) - Some 1,000 Egyptian Jews, the remnant of the Jewish community, are not being allowed to leave the country. A decision taken at high Government level has virtually made them hostages. About one-quarter of the total are held in prison, where they have been since the outbreak of the Six Day War.

Revealing these facts in a report issued in Paris this week, the European office of the American Jewish Committee disclosed that documents permitting those Jews still behind bars to be released were placed before President Nasser for signature some months ago, "but he never signed them".

The committee said that, prior to September 19, Jews not held in prison could leave the country. But on that date 26 men, women and children due to sail from Alexandria after having been deprived of all their rights were suddenly refused permission to leave. None had left since.

"The Egyptian Government refuses to permit investigation into the situation of the Jewish minority inside the country by a special representative of the U.N. Secretary-General", the report pointed out, adding: "This policy is common to other Arab States also discriminating against their Jewish minorities".

Iraq is said to be holding 26 Jews in prison, and Egypt, Iraq and Syria are stated to have "adopted a whole set of measures discriminating against their Jewish minorities, flagrantly violating basic human rights. In effect, they are treating their Jewish populations as alien or enemy".

BERGER OUT

New York, (JCNS) - Rabbi Elmer Berger, for many years the head and executive vice president of the anti-Zionist American Council for Judaism, was defeated badly and lost his position to the more moderate majority. The vote against him at the annual meeting last weekend here was 750 as to 150 in his favor.

This vote may mean that the American Council for Judaism will become less anti-Israeli.

PRAISES CANADA.-Abba Eban, Israel's Foreign Minister, addressing Ontario Zionists last Sunday, stated, i.e., "Canada has a special place in the hearts of Israelis and there is now honest candor between the two. A ceasefire is not a substitute for peace and neighboring governments will require initiative and good will to be able to foresee the great advantages of peace in the Middle East.
"Unless you believe in miracles you are not a realist."

TRUDEAU, SHARP, EBAN HELD IMPORTANT TALKS

by the CJN diplomatic editor

The Canadian Government will continue its policy of "quiet diplomacy" regarding the Middle East. This became clear in Ottawa this week following the visit of Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban. Mr. Eban made two public addresses in Toronto on Sunday prior to his private talks on Monday in the capital with Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, Secretary of State for External Affairs Mitchell Sharp and their advisers.

Israel's brilliant Foreign Minister attracted an audience of about 1,500 when he spoke at the Inn On The Park, under the auspices of the Canadian Friends of the Weizmann Institute, where Mr. Murray Koffler chaired the dinner. Foreign Minister Sharp saluted Mr. Eban; Mayor Dennison greeted him on behalf of the City of Toronto. Rabbi Albert Pappenheim made the invocation.

Mr. Eban's other public appearance in Toronto was at the 28th regional convention of the Zionist Organization of Canada at the Seaway Towers where, under the chairmanship of outgoing president Max Goody, approximately 600 heard Mr. Eban exhort Canadian Zionists to support Israel's pursuit for building a peaceful society. The closing speech of the convention was made by Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut. The newly elected president of the region is Daniel Monson of St. Catharines.

CANADA'S INFLUENCE STRESSED

The diplomatic significance of Abba Eban's visit to Canada was stressed publicly by Israel's Foreign Minister himself when he stated in an interplay of political phrases for which he is famous: although Israel was "not looking" for "a specific" Canadian initiative at the United Nations "on the question of boundaries," it believes Ottawa, because it is traditionally a friend of all nations in the Middle East, including Israel, could exert considerable influence in the direction of a peaceful settlement of the conflict.

Eban's public statement was echoed by Canada's Foreign Minister Sharp who declared, in Ottawa's support of the Israeli position, that the objective of the present negotiations must be the establishment of permanent borders through discussions between Arab nations and Israel. Mr. Sharp also officially supported Mr. Eban's statement that the Israeli Government will maintain its "fluid" position in the negotiations now reportedly being held "indirectly" between Arab states and Israel so that no obstacles would rock these talks under U.N. Mediator Jarring.

While in Canada, Mr. Eban refuted reports from Jerusalem that his diplomatic statements on the present secret peace talks are not approved "unanimously" by the Israeli Cabinet. However, persistent information from Jerusalem maintains that there is a difference of opinion within the Government.

DIFFERENCES WITHIN CABINET

The Canadian Jewish News correspondents report from Israel the following developments:

It is acknowledged that Jordan seriously is negotiating peace as Hussein's throne seems to depend upon a quick arrangement in order that he may proceed with the consolidation of his regime.

While Mr. Eban, in Canada, denied any rift within the Cabinet, Moshe Dayan, in a speech in Tel Aviv, declared that present hopes for peace are "an illusion", that "peace was as far off as ever" that Israel "must prepare itself for another armed conflict."

Menachem Begin, Minister of State and one of the influential members of the present government, stated that if this (Mr. Eban's) policy prevails he (Begin) may leave the coalition: but "if the supreme international interest demands it," he will remain.

OTTAWA OPPOSES ANTI-ISRAEL U.N. CAMPAIGN

In Ottawa both Prime Minister Trudeau and Foreign Minister Sharp acknowledged Canada's support in principle of Mr. Eban's efforts in the negotiations to bring about peace with recognized boundaries.

This position of Canada means Ottawa opposes the anti-Israel campaign at the United Nations that Israel withdraw immediately from Arab territories in order to implement the 1967 Security Council Resolution and receive in return "Arab recognition of Israel's right to exist." This is the Egyptian attitude to which Russia would add a four-power guarantee for Israel.

Mr. Eban rejected outright this Russian "guarantee", stating that the Soviet Union also "guaranteed" Czechoslovakian independence. He told Prime Minister Trudeau and Foreign Minister Sharp that the Middle East is not a "protectorate of any power"; rather, it should become a region where free states live together in peace and harmony.

Also it seems Canada supports Israel's contention repeated by Mr. Eban in Ottawa: no matter how good the intentions, and the "indirect negotiations", only direct Arab-Israeli agreements freely negotiated will bring about final peace.

Election South of the Border

AN EXCLUSIVE BY RICHARD YAFFE

WE INTERVIEW HUMPHREY

What the presidential candidate told our JCNS correspondent

New York, (JCNS).-Hubert H. Humphrey, the Vice-President of the United States and the Democratic candidate of the Presidency, has told the JCNS in a exclusive interview that, while he considers the Middle East "the world's most explosive danger spot and a major threat to world peace," he will work towards a reduction in the "risk of confrontation" between America and the Soviet Union.

This was in reply to the first of a series of questions put to him by the JCNS. In reply to the question, "What is your policy on the Middle East?" he replied: "We must work for peace in the area, strengthen moderate constructive regimes and combine our efforts for the economic development of all Middle East countries".

Speaking of the need to "reduce the risk of confrontation" with the Soviet Union, Mr. Humphrey said that "the search for peace in the Middle East depends on our ability to convince the Russians to turn their efforts to peaceful, economic development".

He reiterated his "strategy for peace", as enunciated by him on October 8 in Washington, as follows:

"1. The existence of the State of Israel must be accepted by all its neighbours;

"2. The boundaries of all these countries must be transformed into agreed and secure frontiers;

"3. The State of Israel must have free navigational rights in all international waters, including the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Akaba;

"4. The arms race must be ended;

"5. The international community must assist in solving the human tragedy posed by the Arab refugees;

"6. The resources of Middle East countries must be used for human and economic development, rather than war and destruction".

He added, to the JCNS, that he looked to Israel "not only as a nation which can strengthen resistance to Soviet and Communist pressures in the region, but as an outpost of democracy which can bolster democratic forces everywhere in the Middle East, Africa and Asia by her example. Israel is teaching the entire region that democracy works best".

The other questions and answers were as follows:

Q. Do you favour the supply of the latest type of combat aircraft to Israel to match the modern equipment supplied by the Soviet Union to the Arabs? (Asked before President Johnson's announcement that he had asked the Secretary of State, Mr. Rusk, to enter into negotiations with Israel for the sale of supersonic aircraft).

Mr. Humphrey: "Yes. We cannot minimise or ignore the flow of Soviet arms into the region, thereby upsetting an already delicate balance. To re-establish that balance - to preserve the security of the region - I believe that we must provide Israel with Phantom aircraft. And we will continue to support Israel with the weapons she needs if there is a further threat to her existence. Israel will not be insecure through any failure on our part.

"But in the future, we cannot hope for peace, permanent peace, lasting peace, unless there are comprehensive agreements among the major suppliers in the area - and among the recipient countries themselves. This arms race must not go unchecked, for the sake of the people in the region, for the sake, of all of us. (Emphasis throughout the interview are Mr. Humphrey's).

"The Russians say they want an agreement. Let them show their good faith. Let them join with us to end this arms race. Let us conclude an agreement that provides for the security of all these Middle East countries. And let us do it now".

Q. Do you agree with the Israeli view that direct talks with the Arab States are the only way of obtaining a secure and lasting peace?

Mr. Humphrey: "Yes, I favour diplomatic efforts to convice Israel's neighbours to pursue a general settlement. It is in the interests of all parties in the Middle East to engage actively in negotiation agreements among the nations in that region".

Q. In the absence of such talks, what policy will you advise Israel to follow in the Middle East?

Mr. Humphrey: "I hope that Israel will continue to make clear to her Arab neighbours that she wants peace and that she is ready to co-operate with them for peace and economic development".

Q. Are you prepared to reiterate President Johnson's five points as the basis for a viable Middle East settlement?

Mr. Humphrey: "My six points for peace above include the policies covered by the President's five points".

Q. What active steps are you prepared to take to promote a Middle East settlement?

Mr. Humphrey: "I will actively press for each of my six points. "Furthermore, as President, I shall make available my good offices, through the United Nations and directly, to search for peace and understanding in the Middle East. I shall be a peace President. And I shall dedicate myself to finding peace in the Middle East, just as I pledged to do in Vietnam.

"And I shall call upon the Soviet Union to join me in these efforts. We must take the first steps towards peace, and we must take them now. As Pope Paul said, 'Development is the new name for peace'. I know this may sound bold, but peace in this region will not be built by the timid.

"Our effort must be a combined effort in which we and the Soviet Union join with other major powers - and with the countries of the region - in the tasks of economic development. This co-operation should begin with a programme for the desalination of water, and then go on to other tasks. I do not expect a sudden success, an overnight end to the conflict. But I do expect that quiet counsel and patient effort can lead these countries to the distant day of peace".

Q. In your view, is the United States committed to maintaining the territorial integrity of Israel if she is attacked?

Mr. Humphrey: "Yes. We continue our firm commitment to the State of Israel. We will take no steps in the Middle East that do not conform to that interest".

Q. Should Israel rely on the United Nations for her security against Arab terrorism; should she retaliate, or should she do nothing?

Mr. Humphrey: "The first duty of government is to protect its citizens. Attacks or invasions must be repulsed. It makes no difference whether the agressor is a foreign army or foreign-based terrorists".

Q. Are you prepared, in any discussion you may have with the Soviet Union, to discuss the status of Soviet Jewry and request permission for those Jews who wish to join relatives outside the U.S.S.R. to do so?

Mr. Humphrey: "Yes".

Vice-President Hubert Humphrey

Begin sees Cabinet breaking up

Tel Aviv, (JCNS) - Israel's Coalition Government, established on the eve of the Six Day War, faces increasing strains and the day of its collapse may not be far off. This was intimated by Mr. Menachem Begin, the Minister of State and leader of the Herut Party (a partner in Gahal, the alignment with the Liberal Party), when he addressed the movement's national council.

Mr. Begin declared:

"We have reason to believe that decisions are in the offing which will oblige Herut to reconsider its attitude on a number of questions, including participation in the Cabinet of National Unity."

The Minister added that, for reasons of electorial tactics, Herut was interested in returning to opposition, but "if the supreme national interest demands it, we shall stay on."

Mr. Begin's words are taken as a hint that the Government may soon be obliged to consider in detail the question of its minimum peace demands, particularly their territorial aspects. Herut regards all new territories as "liberated" and would oppose any concessions on this ussue.

Mr. Begin is known to have been practically isolated at last Sunday's Cabinet meeting when he took exception to the Foreign Minister's General Assembly speech. This indicated Israel's readiness to discuss matters of substance with Mr. Gunnar Jarring, the U.N. special envoy.

The Herut leader claimed that this constituted a breach of previous Cabinet decisions that Israel's terms would only be discussed face-to-face with the Arabs at the negotiating tables.

Mr. Begin and his allies are keeping a close watch on Mr. Eban's words and moves.

Fourth Year for Toronto's Beth Tzedec Jewish Studies College

The fourth academic year of the Beth Tzedec College of Jewish Studies begins on Monday evening, October 28th.

Three years ago Beth Tzedec Congregation established a College of Jewish Studies because it was mindful of a basic obligation to increase the understanding of Judaism among College students. This institution of higher Jewish learning is an essential link in the chain of educational programming of Beth Tzedec Congregation: ranging from Nursery School through Hebrew high school, College of Jewish Studies and a very active adult education program, Beth Tzedec Congregation is now offering a varied educational program for all ages.

In three short years the College has grown to an enrollment of over fifty students attending Hebraic and Judaic courses offered by an outstanding faculty. The course of study of the 1968/69 academic year includes courses in Talmudic Theology; Talmud; Bible; Modern Hebrew Literature; Sociology and History.

In addition to the formal program of instruction the Beth Tzedec College of Jewish Studies offers a varied program of academic encounters, cultural and social activities for College students.

A descriptive brochure and registration form are available from the College office.

CANADIAN PACIFIC DIRECT TO GREECE

Canadian Pacific Airlines now is operating the only direct flights from Canada to Greece. The event was commemorated philatelically with First Flight Covers. Four different aerograms were prepared with a special cachet in English, French and Greek: two for the flight from Toronto and two for the flight from Montreal. The envelopes were franked with a Canadian stamp and a Greek stamp of five drachma for the first flights from Toronto, Sept. 9, 1968, and from Montreal, Sept. 10, 1968. Return flight covers bear the same Canadian stamps but a Greek one of two drachma completing the Greek set.

The aerograms flown by a new CPA Spacemaster Jet Douglas DC-8 received a back postmark in Athens at Hellinikon Airport on Sept. 1st and 11th. The return flight covers were canceled by hand in the Greek Post Office with a postmark reading in French, Service Philatelique - 12-LX-68 - Athinai, franking the two drachma Greek stamp were backstamped by Canadian Pacific Airlines in Montreal on the date of their arrival in Canada.

All aerograms received a special cancelation by the Canadian Post Office in French and English reading, Premier Vol Canada Grece - First Flight Canada Greece, showing a design of the Spacemaster jet in black. All the envelopes flown contain a polychrome postcard showing the type of jet that carried the mail.

This is the second time the Canadian Post Office has accepted a foreign stamp for cancelation on what is basically Canadian mail but the aerograms are most unusual because they combine on the return flights the stamps of two different countries franked by the respective post offices concerned. The covers will be distributed to stamp dealers in the Montreal area. The First Flight covers have been prepared and produced by Vittorio Zanoncelli of Montreal.

The world's most popular liqueur!

Cherry Heering first made in Copenhagen in 1818, is still being made in exactly the same way, in exactly the same place by the Heering family.

Cherry Heering is made from plump black Danish cherries. Its rich, dark cerise bouquet and flavor make it unique.

Cherry Heering is a liqueur whose cheerful cherry flavor ends a meal on just the right note. On ice or in tall drinks it is delectable. Poured over ice cream it makes a sensational dessert.

Cherry Heering is a Danish delight as popular as Danish pastry, as elegant as Danish furniture. Cherry Heering is Denmark's contribution to world friendship and international cheerfulness.

* Eddie Fisher's brother Bunnie, known also as Al Fisher, now is Trini Lopes' road manager.

* Milton Berle is in fine feather at New York City nightclubs. Introducing Abbe Lane at a night spot recently, he said, "We have a lot of stars here tonight . . . like William S. Hart." And when Abbe, singing some Italian songs, asked the audience, "What part of Italy are you from?", Milton answered, "Newark!"

Abbe now is a mother of two and much thinner than before; also more attractive.

She said something about meeting George Jessel in a maternity ward: "I think he was waiting for the birth of his next bride."

When Berle was asked, "Did you ever have your face lifted?" he quipped, "No, but I had my act lifted."

* Comedian Henny Youngman refers to his wife as My Fair Sadie.

* Irving Berlin would think nothing of knocking off three or four dozen great songs a year. The legend of the 80-year-old tunesmith dates back to the turn of the century when, as Izzy Baline, he came to the shores of America from Russia. After working as a singing waiter in a Coney Island celler, he finally crashed the publishers' lists with, Marie from Sunny Italy. From there he published more songs and then really hit the jackpot with Alexander's Ragtime Band. From about 1917 on, taking time out for military service, he wrote anywhere from two to five musical comedies a year, all enjoying long Broadway runs. At one time he composed on a special piano pitched in one key. He had as many as four shows running on Broadway at the same time.

Berlin wrote so many hits, that a story was fabricated to the effect that he didn't compose most of his songs; they were ghostwritten by a colored boy.

One rehearsal day, Berlin found a snag in one of the numbers. He sent the cast out for a breather and sat down at the piano, trying to unsnarl the work. After many hours of perspiration and frustration, Berlin solved the problem. As a result, Say It With Music became one of his best compositions.

But at one point, completely exasperated, Berlin yelled,

"Goddamit, I wish they'd go out and find that colored boy now!"

* Montreal born contralto Maureen Forrester, in private life Mrs. Eugene Kash of Toronto, wife of the Canadian conductor-violinist, often is called Canada's Musical Ambassadress. Her life story has been produced as a movie by the National Film Board of Canada. After years of concert stage singing, she made her operatic debut two years ago in New York. She is mother of five children.

* When Maestro Leonard Bernstein joined the New York Philharmonic twenty-five years ago, he was a brownhaired, 150-pound boy wonder. Now he is a graying, slightly overweight 50-year-old wonder.

When, at one point during a rehearsal, it was noted he looked as though he had been lifting weights, Bernstein laughed: "Do you know the weight of that Mahler score? It's incalculable. It's a five-minute -- I mean a five-movement -- work . . . I'm so tired I don't know what I'm saying."

Bernstein sprints to keep in shape.

"I love to play the piano," he says. "It's still my first love. There's a special electricity about it. But it's physically impossible for me to give recitals -- no time to practise. Right now I've fallen in love with lieder. If I had to point to one evening, the most exciting evening of my career, it was a liederabend in Vienna last April."

* DO YOU ACCEPT THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION? HOW CAN IT BE RECONCILED WITH THE STORY OF CREATION?

* The conflict between Genesis and the scientific account of the age of the earth and the emergence of man upon it was particularly acute in the last century but its echoes are still with us. Some people still feel obliged to reject the findings of geology, astronomy, biology, anthropology, etc., in favor of a literal understanding of Genesis. On this view God planted the fossils, for example, for reasons of His own or, on the more sophisticated level, He created the world with the appearance of having been the result of a long evolutionary process much as presumably He created Adam with a navel!

Bertrand Russell has said that if one is prepared to argue in this way one could argue as effectively that we had all been created a minute ago with ready-made memories and holes in our socks. Most of us prefer to accept the new picture which has emerged through the devoted researches of a host of highly gifted students of nature whose theories, though tentative, are extremely plausible. If one accepts the scientific picture one can try to reconcile it with Genesis by suggesting that Genesis really teaches the same thing, each "day" of creation, for example, representing a very long period of time.

But this will not do for two reasons. First, our knowledge of classical Hebrew will not permit this interpretation (and, in any event, what is one to make of the terms "evening" and "morning"?). Secondly, in Genesis vegetation is complete two "days" (-"periods") before animal life appears whereas geology shows that they appear simultaneously. In Genesis fishes and birds appear together before all land-animals whereas geology shows that birds appear long after fishes and are preceded by species of land-animals.

The late Rabbi Kook (Orot Ha-Kodesh, Part 5, 19-22) suggested that the creation narrative belongs to the "secrets of the Torah" and must in no way be interpreted in literal fashion. He accepted the theory of evolution as fully compatible with Jewish optimism rightly understood. The whole creation is seen as gradually moving towards ever higher goals because the Creator is Eternal and Infinite. It seems to me that the most satisfactory approach is to acknowledge that the Biblical authors, though inspired, shared the knowledge of their contemporaries on the nature of the physical universe. The sublime creation narrative loses nothing from the frank recognition that the eternal truth to which it gives expression, that God is Creator and Sustainer of the universe, is set within the framework of a vanished age.

* IN SOME ORTHODOX SYNAGOGUES THE BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM GO INTO A PRIVATE ROOM IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY. WHAT IS THE REASON FOR THIS?

* The marriage ceremony as practised today is composed of two parts, originally distinct from one another. The first of these is known as erusin (betrothal) or kiddushin (dedication) and consists of the delivery of the ring with the appropriate formula. The second stage is known as nisuin (marriage) and is represented by the chupa. In Talmudic times the first ceremony generally took place approximately a year before the nisuin. From the time of kiddushin the couple were bound to one another, but the bride remained in her father's house until the nisuin, when they became legally married for all purposes.

Some authorities argue that nisuin requires more than the chupa. They hold that for nisuin to be effected it is necessary for the couple to be alone in a room (yihud), as a symbolic consummation of the marriage.

A Great Statesman

PAUL MARTIN

The nonpartisan recognition extended the leader of the Senate and former Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Hon. Paul Martin, cannot be ignored in a Jewish newspaper. In fact, we regret profoundly that among the expressions of praise heaped upon this great Canadian Statesman--by such eminent Canadian leaders as Prime Minister Trudeau, former Prime Ministers Diefenbaker and Pearson--somehow we haven't heard a Jewish voice. Perhaps this was due to the fact that the surprise party in Windsor was held on Friday night, the Jewish Sabbath.

However, to us of The Canadian Jewish News, Paul Martin will remain one of the outstanding friends of our people and a courageous supporter of the most important effort of our Jewish generation: the consolidation of the State of Israel.

We especially are proud of the fact that, during his tenure of office as Canada's Foreign Minister, Mr. Martin was an occasional contributor to this newspaper. In his articles he openly discussed Canada's interest in the struggle for peace in the Middle East.

Paul Martin is a man who not only fought for peace despite the East-West conflicts but never forgot to seek the peace of Jerusalem.

Bertrand, Lesage, Levesque

WHITHER QUEBEC?

Now that the Quebec Separatist Movement has established a democratic party, Parti Quebecois, which received in general a good press and since under the leadership of René Levesque this movement has been given prestige acceptance as a serious organization, we should analyze the situation in French Canada from our Jewish point of view.

First and foremost, once and for all, we must take into consideration the basic fact: whether it is Jacques Bertrand, the new Premier of Quebec, the Liberal opposition leader, Jean Lesage or the Separatist leader, Rene Levesque, there is no essential difference among them with regard to the priority of French in what they consider the homeland of French Canadians.

Priority of French means, no matter what the interpretation: within five years people living in Quebec will have to act as those residing in and belonging to a country French by language and culture.

The political solution—whether Quebec remains part of Canada, which is the hope of the majority of Canadians, or not—does not alter in the least the picture that the working language of all institutions and businesses, and this includes Jewish organizations, will have to be French. There is no sense fighting for the rights to oppose the priority of French and it is unfair to the majority of the people of Quebec.

It is so much nonsense to say that Americans will not invest in Quebec if those there speak primarily French. Americans invest in Turkey and in Greece; tomorrow they may invest in China. The investments must be profitable--language is irrelevant.

Of all minority groups in Quebec, Jews always have understood best the aspirations of the people fighting for its spiritual survival. There is no reason for Jewish community organizations waiting for laws making French predominant. This adjustment has nothing to do with defending the rights of English speaking minorities which everybody understands.

AJC, CJC, WJC

WHAT THE INITIALS MEAN

In this issue The Canadian Jewish News presents a remarkable column Arthur L. Jacobs, acting publisher of the Jewish Day-Journal in New York, wrote for his paper. We are reprinting the article that appeared under the heading, The American Anti-Jewish Congress, because it raises problems not limited to Jewish life south of the border.

First, for the benefit of the Canadian reader, it should be stressed that, while the American Jewish Congress has become today one of the minor Jewish organizations in the United States with practically no following, one should not confuse it with the Canadian Jewish Congress which is a representative group. However, we believe the error committed by the Canadian Jewish Congress is to be associated with the American Jewish Congress in Dr. Nahum Goldmann's paper organization called World Jewish Congress.

The World Jewish Congress by far does not have the influence of such bodies as the American Jewish Committee, the Alliance Israelite Universelle, the British Board of Jewish Deputies or the Anglo-Jewish Association.

On the other hand, the CJC because of this affiliation with the American Jewish Congress, a group consistently backing certain radical movements in the United States and opposing, as Mr. Jacobs points out, the most profound aspirations of Jewry for spiritual survival, indirectly becomes influenced by this insignificant group and adds to its prestige.

Time was when the American Jewish Congress played an important role. Today it is the American Jewish Committee of which Ambassador Arthur Goldberg is president that really exercises the most important influence in America.

The time has come for us to reassess our connections with international Jewish organizations. Certainly the World Jewish Congress had its day. It has nothing now to offer Canadian Jewry.

OPINIONS

by Arthur L. Jacobs

THE AMERICAN ANTI JEWISH CONGRESS

The American Jewish Congress by its name implies that it represents American Jews.

Is this so?

On the question of Yeshiva school help by Federal and State authorities, the American Jewish Congress has given the impression that it speaks for American Jewry. The Jewish Congress has testified against that help on the antediluvian theory of separation of church and state. This danger existed and was a great danger 200 years ago. But for not understandable reasons the American Jewish Congress raises the slogans popular during the French revolution to the detriment of Jewish religious schools.

A tremendous part of the burden of the taxpayers for education is born by the observant religious citizens who at the same time pay city taxes for public school support. This is not recognized by the American Jewish Congress. Double school costs for the idealists who survived because of the never-ending fight to preserve Torah teaching (many of whom cannot afford it) bears no weight with the American Jewish Congress which is insensitive to Torah. The fact that the City of New York would financially never be able to build and establish schools to replace religious schools has no bearing with the Jewish Congress. The fact that schools teach discipline and order far better than the public school system today is also disregarded by them. The public school system in New York is in a state of chaos while the religious schools with their deficits go ahead with their educational programs.

Let us now look into the American Jewish Congress' school busing advocacy. Previously if a black family wanted to try to have their children better educated, they would send them to a neighboring school in a white district. Due to the American Jewish Congress backed busing, many of the so-called white schools have become black schools so that the ambitious black parent now is forced to send their children to a private school, if they can afford it, or in the alternative their children now are bused to a newly made ghetto school. One step forward and two steps backward.

Or take the position of the Jewish Congress representatives recently at City Hall. When the question of beatings, robbery and deaths by extremist blacks against Jews in several named sections, especially Brooklyn, came up, the position taken by the Jewish Congress representatives against representatives of other Jewish organizations such as the New York Board of Rabbis, Union of Orthodox Congregations and the Agudas Israel -- was "these beatings are the usual thing in these sections," let us talk about what we can do for the blacks. Has the American Jewish Congress interest for the black community superseded and taken precedence over Jewish lives and interest? If so, why the name Jewish Congress?

The Congress has recently instituted legal action against the Federal Government's aid, to Jewish religious colleges. These colleges, like the schools, cannot progress and do great public work without Federal aid. Again the question is whether the public sector can replace the work of the private sector with new building complexes and new teaching faculties.

The fact that students in religious schools have to meet State Board of Education standards as well as the high standards of religious education is disregarded by the Jewish Congress who yell the empty words "Separation of Church and State".

If the American Jewish Congress would have its way, children would not be bused to Yeshivas, Yeshiva students could not get their secular text books, Yeshivas and synagogues would lose their tax exemption -- all in the name of an outworn theory.

In ritual slaughter (schechita) legislative inquiries through the years, the Jewish Congress has constantly taken a position for legislation that sought to destroy the protection of kosher meat.

How does the American Jewish Congress support itself? Whom does the American Jewish Congress represent? The American Jewish Congress goes to the united welfare appeals of local Jewish communities and fund raising individuals. They apparently capitalize on their name -- American Jewish Congress -- and so are able to raise money.

The allocators and givers of these funds do not seem to be aware that the Jewish Congress' history in recent years has been aggressive opposition to some of the most important treasures of Jewish heritage, namely:

1. Education;
2. The protection of our own people physically, financially and the right to peace and quiet like all other people;
3. Jewish ritual slaughter is undermined in the halls of legislatures.

The American Jewish Congress' policies can only lead to tearing down and destruction of Jewish law in education and schechita and complete disregard for the safety of our people.

The American Jewish Congress has completely forgotten the purposes for which it was founded while the masses of the people still believe that it is an umbrella organization for Jewish communal groups.

KEEP SMILING

WAGER

A big-time gambler just died. The funeral drew a big crowd, mainly his professional buddies. In eulogy, the speaker said, "Nick is not dead. He only sleeps."

From the rear came a voice, "I've got a couple grand that says he don't wake up."

PROMOTION

Cannibal Chief to victim: "What did you do for a living?"

Victim: "I was an associate editor."

Chief: "Cheer up. After tonight you'll be editor-in-chief."

PROPHECY

Sammy knocked at Mrs. Belsky's door. "Are you the Widow Belsky?" he asked.

"I'm Mrs. Belsky," she answered, "but I'm not a widow."

"Oh, no?" Sammy said, "wait till you see what they're carrying upstairs."

REVENGE

Max had been bitten by a dog but he didn't give it much thought until he noticed the wound was taking a long time to heal. So he went to a doctor who took one look at the wound and ordered the dog brought in.

Just as the doctor suspected, the dog had rabies. Since it was too late to give the patient a serum, the doctor felt he should prepare him for the worst.

Poor Max sat down at the doctor's desk and began to write. The physician tried to comfort him.

"Perhaps it won't be so bad," he said. "You needn't make out your will right now."

"I'm not making out any will," replied Max, "I'm just writing out a list of people I'm going to bite."

Letters to the Editor

PRESS AND DEMOCRACY

Dear Editor:

As a former Israeli, I read regularly a daily Hebrew paper from Tel Aviv. In its last issue I noticed that the Gahal alignment which consists of the General Zionist and Herut is about to launch a new foreign language paper in Israel, a Hungarian daily. According to the same story, Gahal considers itself forced into publishing its new paper because Israel's Labor Party has just purchased "Uj Kelet", Israel's only Hungarian language daily.

I understand, from this article, that the company known as "Pirsumim", which belongs to Mapai (now Labor Party), also is negotiating to buy the surviving German language daily, "Yediot Hadashot".

With these purchases Israel's largest political party will control all foreign language dailies in the country, the others being the Yiddish newspaper "Letzte Naies", the Roumanian daily etc.

When I read this article, I compared the situation with the recent announcement that here in Canada the government is planning to intervene in a situation where one group controls too many newspapers. In the United States there is a law which forbids such a centralization of news media in the hands of a political party. Such a group would be prosecuted according to the Anti-Trust Law.

I never agreed with the position taken by The Canadian Jewish News that Zionists here should not intervene in important internal matters in Israel. I think this latest purchase of "Uj Kelet" by Mapai is an outrage and it undermines any hope of those Israelis who look forward to a full democratization of the country and putting political parties in a position of fair competition with each other.

Sermon For The Week

NOACH

In the sedra of Noach there is recounted the ten generations between Noach and Abraham. Regarding these generation The Mishna (Avot 5:2) declares that "there were ten generations between Noach and Abraham to inform one of the great patience of the Almighty, for each generation angered God, until finally Abraham came and received the reward of all of them". The question arises, What reward did these generations deserve since they are described as generations that "angered God"?

In this same Mishna it is also noted that there were ten generations between Adam and Noach to inform one of the great kindness of God that he waited so long before bringing the flood upon the world. However, in this case the Mishna does not say that Noach received the reward of the evil generations previous to himself. Why not? One might answer that since the generations previous to Noach are described as having "angered God", they deserved no reward to which Noach might fall heir. However, if this is so, what reward did the ten generations previous to Abraham deserve since they are also described as having "continually angered God"?

One can understand this by noting an important difference between the generation of the Flood and that of the Tower of Babel. Through this we can also grasp the character of all the generations from Adam to Noach and from Noach to Abraham respectively, for the last generation in each case concluded its respective era and marked its epitome and culmination.

To begin with we can note that the punishments of the two generations differed significantly. In Breishit Rabbah 38:6 (see also Rashi on Chumash, Breishit 11:9) we are told that the generation of the Flood suffered more physical punishment than the generations of the Tower of Babel, for the former were destroyed entirely while the latter were only separated from one another and dispersed over the earth. On the other hand, while there is no doubt that the generation of the Tower of Babel enjoy no share in the world-to-come (Sanhedrin 107b) there is one opinion expressed in the Zohar that the generation of the flood do have a share in the future world. (Although in the Mishna in Sanherdrin even the generation of the Flood have no such share). The question is why did the punishments of these generations differ?

Their punishments can be understood from the nature of their transgressions. The sin of the generation of the Tower of Babel was that they rebelled against God Himself for one of their intentions in building the Tower was to make war on God (Sanhedrin 107a; Rashi, Breishit 11:9; Midrash Rabbah, Breishit 11:9). In spite of this they were not destroyed but only dispersed for their relations among themselves were guided by mutual love and common concern -- "they were of one language and single purpose" (Breishis 11:1). On the other hand, the generation of the Flood while not denying God, committed grevious sins against one another in theft, robbery etc., and they were torn by strife and dissension (Sanhedrin 108a). For this reason they were destroyed physically. Since their transgressions were relevant to human relations and upset the order of living, their physical punishment was the greater. However, the main fault of the builders of the Tower of Babel had to do with man's relation to God, therefore their spiritual punishment was the greater.

One can now understand how Abraham could have received the reward of the generations before him for they deserved reward by right of their love and friendship for one another. However, they were prevented from receiving their reward because of their spiritual insurrection against God. Their reward was suspended until Abraham came and earned it by right of his devotion and sacrifice in making God known to the world. His custom was to provide food for travellers in the desert and instead of pay, required his patrons to pay homage to the Master of the world who sustains all creatures. Abraham even interceded for the wicked of Sodom. All of his efforts were aimed at lifting the spiritual level of his generation. Although a single individual among an entire populace of idolators, nothing deterre him from his attempt to bring light to the darkness of his times. Thus God bestowed on Abraham the blessings originally due his generation but which they were prevented from receiving because of their spiritual unfitness.

Concerning Noach it is not said that he received any special reward for his righteousness other than being saved from the Flood. The reason for this is twofold. First, his and the previous generations earned no reward because of their wrong-doing towards one another. Secondly, Noach himself made no effort to turn his contemporaries from their evil ways nor did he even pray on their behalf as Abraham has done for the men of Sodom. Therefore, he would have received no reward even if his generation had deserved it.

The lesson for us is this: our generations are the last before the coming of the Mashiach. All generations up to now were only preparations for ours which is the culmination of the entire creation. Further, the successful completion of the efforts of previous generations depends on us. Just as Abraham, Ish Chesed, was a man of kindness and love, so we must approach our fellow Jews with a love that will in turn awaken in them the love for God and the Torah that lies hidden in every Jew. With Ahavat Israel, the love of one Jew for his fellow, one can illuminate the holiness that is the inheritance of all Jews and thus bring to fruition, the spiritual efforts of our forefathers. This in turn will complete the ultimate fulfillment of all creation in the coming of our righteous Mashiach.

TORONTO AFTER DARK

NEW VERSION

A new production of The King and I, perhaps the most charming of all the Rodgers and Hammerstein musicals, comes to O'Keefe Center for two weeks commencing next Monday, October 28th. Featured are Constance Towers as Anna, Michael Ansara as the King, Joan Sanders as Lady Thiang. Others in the cast are Eleanor Calbes, Harry Theyard, Arthur Bartow, William Le Massena and Barry Robins.

STARS IN SLAPSTICK COMEDY.- Briain Petchey, who is featured in Black Comedy, a Trio Production, at Toronto's TWP Theater. The play will be presented one more week.

MUSICAL COMEDY

Anne of Green Gables continues to capacity audiences at the Royal Alex. A special matinee will be presented on Tuesday for school classes.

THREE SUCCESSFUL PLAYS

Trio Productions Limited is presenting three plays this season which meet with good success: Black Comedy, by Peter Shaffer, at TWP Theater; Staircase, at The Colonnade; The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton Under the Direction of the Marquis de Sade, by Peter Weiss, at Number Eleven Theater.

Black Comedy uses an old Chinese technique of reversing light and darkness. When the lights are on the audience sees actors who appear to be performing in darkness. Result: hilarious comedy experience.

Staircase is the bittersweet comedy on the love of two aging homosexual barbers, starring Jack Creley and Sandy Webster.

Marat/Sade has been called the most controversial play of the decade. It stars Robert Christie, Tony Moffat-Lynch, Vivian Reis, Dennis Sweeting and Kenneth Wickes. William Marshall directs.

MISS SNOW QUEEN

Twenty-year-old Kathy Kerr of Toronto, chosen Miss Snow Queen, will reign over the fourth annual Canadian Winter Sports Show this weekend at Exhibition Park. Skating, skiing and tobogganing are her favorite sports. Other interests include walking in all sorts of weather. And when she is not modeling or otherwise engaged, she attends dances at the Universtiy of Toronto.

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES: GOOD, WHOLESOME SHOW

It would be a pity for any family to miss the Charlottetown Festival presentation of Anne of Green Gables, now at the Royal Alex.

Though the musical has been described with superlatives, including such adjectives as sophisticated, fascinating, one element has been ignored: identity.

For Anne of Green Gables is identifiable anywhere from age ten through maturity. That is what gives a play heart. Superb or mediocre, if one can identify with a character in but a small way -- that spells success.

Mavor Moore's production contains no message, no controversy; it is just plain entertaining. Hence all the more power to it.

It was a toss-up over what to watch: the moving play itself or the reaction of youngsters dotting the audience.

For who can remain unmoved by the red-headed, freckle-faced orphan who wanted so much to have a family, to "belong"?

Gracie Finley as Anne "with an 'e'" assumes the role with intelligence and restraint; she is not maudlin.

Barbara Hamilton is excellent in her portrayal of the Spinster Marilla who opens her heart to the little girl, albeit reluctantly at first.

There is much pathos on the part of Matthew, Marilla's bachelor brother (played by Peter Mews), who paves the way to rapport between the two.

Sniffles are copious, especially when Matthew "passes on".

But since Anne of Green Gables is a musical, gaiety is its forte. And as the plot unfolds, many instances become identifiable.

So far as the small fry is concerned, the schoolroom scene steals the show.

When one of Anne's classmates is caught with a prune in his mouth and he impudently tells the teacher he "is soaking it for recess," one voice in the audience, sotto voce, can be heard, "That's nothing; my class is worse." And when some of the daddies whisper, "It brings me back to my boyhood," -- Anne of Green Gables passes with flying colors.

However, since nothing is absolutely flawless, one criticism I venture to make: it would be advisable for the young men playing school boys to shave their legs.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH ARABS?

THEY DELUDE THEMSELVES

by ATALLAH MANSOUR

Jerusalem, (JCNS) - Immediately after the Six Day War, it was generally agreed throughout the Arab countries that one of the factors contributing to the Arab defeat was the failure to exploit the mass communications media. Every Arab leader and journalist pointed to errors and shortcomings in Arab propaganda.

These include: exaggeration of Arab strength; underestimation of the enemy; and irresponsible statements, such as: "We shall throw them into the sea".

In Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Lebanon, journalists promised their readers and radio commentators assured their listeners that, from that time onwards, they would stick to the facts and to rational commentaries.

But the passage of time has belied these promises. Listeners to Arab radio stations and readers of the Arab press have no difficulty in realizing that nothing has changed in the Arab mass media - except that there have, perhaps, been fewer wild threats than previously.

Every edition of the news bulletins on the Syrian radio contains "communiques" reporting operations by terrorists in which they claim to have killed tens of Israeli soldiers and then to have returned safely to their bases.

The Syrian terrorist group calls itself "Al Tsaaka", according to the Syrian radio. But Egypt's radio broadcasts do not acknowledge its existence. They are too busy broadcasting the claims of El Fatah and other terrorist organizations of their own, which are, in turn, never mentioned by the Syrian radio.

The Jordanians mention neither the Syrian nor the Egyptian terrorists in their Arabic-language broadcasts. In their Hebrew programs, however, they refer to those recognized by Cairo, but only those.

As for the Arab newspapers, except for those in Lebanon, they mention only the terrorist organizations approved of by the Government of the country in which they appear.

Since all the Arab newspapers vie with one another in exaggerating the "victories" against Israel of the particular terrorist organizations they support, it is puzzling that not a single paper has yet asked why all these victories have still not forced Israel to show a little more flexibility, and why, for instance, she has not been forced to abandon her insistence on direct negotiations.

It is also difficult to understand how the Arab Governments can hope to convince any of their citizens of the truth of the oft-repeated statements that "Israel is being liquidated" when 15,000 Arabs from the surrounding countries visited Israel this summer and saw for themselves that the country is far from being liquidated.

As for the other countries of the world, the growing number of tourists and the reports sent to their newspapers by foreign correspondents demonstrate the truth - which is vastly different from the self-deceiving picture painted by the Arab mass media.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

FRESH PURPLE PLUM CRUNCH

4 cups pitted and quartered fresh purple plums
1/4 cup brown sugar
3 tblsps. flour
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1 egg
1 cup sifted flour
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. mace
1/2 cup butter, melted
Oven termperature: 375 deg.
Bake: 45 minutes
Servings: 6 or more

Wash, dry and split the fresh purple plums. Remove pits and cut each half into two pieces. Arrange in a layer in a baking pan (9x9x2 in.). In a small bowl stir the brown sugar with the three tablespoons of flour and cinnamon. Sprinkle over the fruit. In a bowl beat the egg with a rotary beater until light. Sift the remaining flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and mace together over the beaten egg. Mix together with a fork until well blended and crumbly. Scatter crumbs evenly over the fruit.

HUMAN RELATIONS

A Cry for Help

by Dr. Rose Franzblau

QUESTION: I am happily married to a wonderful man for 1 1/2 years. All this time his sister has been a constant problem to both of us.

From the moment I met her she told me she was unhappy with her husband. She would call at odd hours of the day or night and cry about her husband or her children. When I suggested professional help she would get annoyed. The solution to her problems that she uses is drinking. We are at our wit's end.

We have tried to interest her in a job, recommended a clinic for therapy, but to no avail. Recently, she has called to tell us her husband beat her and asked us to intervene. When my husband refused, she said that I was alienating her brother.

How can we make her realize that she needs professional help?

ANSWER: Avoidance of help when needed comes from a fear of facing reality, which represents a great threat. The person fears that when her basic problems come to light, she will be seen as a disturbed, sick person who is beyond repair.

Also the person doesn't want to find out the truth about herself because of her poor self-image. With the weaknesses out in the open, she would have to take responsibility for her behavior, rather than hold other people responsible.

As in this situation, the person sometimes tries to escape from reality by drowning herself in drink. Liquor becomes the controlling force, instead of a parent. The only difference is that she can blame liquor for the acting out, and besides, liquor doesn't respond with reprimands or by imposing discipline.

She probably always felt her brother was the one in the family who brought the parents the greatest pleasure. She is now acting out the envy of him she had always felt by intruding on his marriage and his happy new life.

When she calls to complain, at any time of the day or night, she is not asking for help, but trying to adulterate her brother's happiness. She is also envious of you for becoming the first woman in her brother's life.

Symbolically, she is feeding herself through the bottle, what her mother denied her in preferring her brother over her.

This behavior, as you sense correctly, is not vicious or mean, but sick. To side with her against her husband and become the punishing agent to reprimand and discipline him would only be to play into her wish to divide and rule. It would not diminish but would only deepen her problem, and also create unnecessary problems for you. Your husband cannot take on the responsibility either for his sister's unhappiness in her marriage, or for her psychological problems.

BUT NEITHER CAN YOU WITHDRAW COMPLETELY FROM the scene. The advice you have given is, of course, correct. Only theraphy can help to solve her problems.

It would not be an act of disloyalty for your husband to discuss with his brother-in-law how he can best get his wife to go for help.

In any unhappy marriage, each of the partners contributes a share to the tensions and dissentions that follow. That your sister-in-law has taken to drink and makes these crank calls, shows that she really has an emotional problem, which her husband did not create. They may also represent a cry for help.

A few consultations with an expert on how to convince his wife to go would be of help to your brother-in-law. If the stories she tells about him are really true, such consultations would also help him in controlling his behavior when his wife gets out of hand.

WILL SPEAK AT RECEPTION -- Rear Admiral Shlomo Erel, who will address a reception meeting this coming Tuesday evening at the Primrose Club in advance of the Upper Canada Lodge B'nai B'rith tribute dinner honoring Harry Farber. Albert Latner will be host of the event which precedes the dinner to be held Saturday night November 2nd.

IT'S A FREE COUNTRY
by Ruthie

Don't you love the phrase, it's a free country? It lends color and finalizes anything you say. I tell you, a brukha (blessing) on Columbus. He started the whole thing by discovering America, Land of the Free. It's tahka (truly) Columbus' madeena (country).

So Jackie Kennedy's finally married again. And what a name! Mrs. Aristotle Socrates Onassis. With a moniker like that, named for two famous Greek philosophers, who says the man isn't cultured? Why, just pronouncing it shows good breeding.

The money? Nu, so what? Just a mere $500 million. I bet I could go through that in my lifetime.

Let's see. First of all, there are taxes. Then, a fur coat for every day of the week. Like a mink shmotta (rag) for shopping, a leopard for sports, a sable for meetings, a chinchilla for evenings. And in all kinds of style not to be monotonous.

And not only would I send a plane for a fresh head of lettuce, but I'd make sure more than that got to the starving children in Biafra every day.

Onassis bought an island? Hm-m-m-m. So I'd buy the whole Middle East for Israel and I'd see that everybody was happy. After all, money talks.

Jackie now will spend more than $50,000 a year on clothes. Why, that's a mere pittance. I'm sure I could top that because I wear a couple of sizes larger, which means buying more material. Logical, no?

But -- since I don't have even a sprinkling of that kind of moola (even thinking of it makes me dizzy) and she does, nu, let her use it her own way gezoonterhait (in the best of health). Minnistahm (maybe) she needs it. And anyway, it's a free country.

* * * *

Mama says pitter (butter), Papa says pooter; Mama says, oi vei; Papa says oi vay; Mama says kimm shoin (come already), Papa says koom shain; Mama says fleish, Papa says flaish; Mama says toog (day), Papa says tug; Mama counts eintz, tzvei (one, two), Papa counts aintz, tzvai; Mama says fish; Papa says fiss; Mama says Shobbos, Papa says Tzobbos; Mama says Moisha, Papa says Maisha; Mama says imglick (misfortune), Papa says oomglick; Mama says shnopps, Papa says snopps. Gevalt (mercy)!

That can go on till doomsday. A good thing they understand each other. Nu, it's a free country.

* * * *

The other day Ned and I took a walk. No reason, just stomm (like that). The kids were surprised because when do we ever have the time to shpotzeer (take a walk) together? But it was such a gorgeous afternoon, I noodjett (nagged) so much, he gave in.

You don't know my husband. His favorite position is horizontal. Ah drimml (a catnap) and he are synonymous.

So we went for a walk. Nu, I took advantage. I let loose with all the gripes I had stored in my mind for such an occasion.

I was only halfway through when he already interrupted, "So herr oif shoin (stop it already) with the complaints. This is a walk? Look at the trees, smell the fresh air. Yak, yak, yak."

"So when do I have such a chance? Who can corner you alone? So I'll talk. It's a free country."

Silence.

Suddenly my feet began to ache. I should have realized that a walk with him meant wearing flats and not heels.

"Oi! Don't walk so fast! My feet are killing me. Haven't you any pity? Oi! And my legs are chafing. Who can enjoy the trees? It's torture. Oi!"

So stop with the music already. You wanted to walk."

"Well, now I don't wanna. Anyhow, it's a free country."

What's it good for?

Paying by cheque, your own personal cheque, even in places where you're a complete stranger. Cashing cheques without question, delay or embarrassment.

What's so different about this card?

Bernstein's composing project now is to write the score for a musical staging of Brecht's one-act, The Exception and the Rule, scheduled for Broadway next season. "It'll be a chamber orchestra, maybe not in the pit at all, but positioned around the stage in groups. I don't want to say for sure yet, because it depends on how it goes in rehearsals."
